The Lyceum Poll Finds:
- Among likely voters:
  - Governor: Greg Abbott 49%, Wendy Davis 40%
  - Lt. Governor: Dan Patrick 47%, Leticia Van de Putte 33%
  - U.S. Senate: John Cornyn 48%, David Alameel 30%
  - Republicans leading in generic ballots for Congress and State Legislature
  - Constitutional amendment for transportation funding supported by 74%
  - Texans are paying attention, but “too soon to tell” if Governor Perry broke the law, most Texans believe charges are “political”
  - President Obama’s job approval is split

(AUSTIN) A recent poll conducted by the Texas Lyceum, the premiere statewide nonprofit, nonpartisan leadership group, shows that among likely voters Republican Attorney General Greg Abbott is ahead of Democratic State Senator Wendy Davis by nine percentage points. Davis holds a clear lead among Democrats (86 percent to 6 percent), Hispanics (62 percent to 26 percent), and African Americans (83 percent to 3 percent). However, Abbott holds strong leads among Republicans (85 percent to 5 percent) and Anglos (62 percent to 27 percent), and also slight leads with both Independents (38 percent to 32 percent) and with women (46 percent to 44 percent).

The poll, which carries a margin of error of +/- 3.8 percent for the likely voter subsample, was conducted September 11 – 25.

In the race for Lieutenant Governor, Republican State Senator Dan Patrick of Houston leads likely voters over Democratic State Senator Leticia Van de Putte of San Antonio by 14 points (47 percent to 33 percent) with a stronghold among Republicans (85 percent to 2 percent) and Anglos (59 percent to 22 percent).
Van de Putte leads Patrick among Democrats (75 percent to 5 percent), African Americans (68 percent to 4 percent), and Hispanics (55 percent to 31 percent).

In a generic ballot between Republican and Democratic candidates for 2014 races in Congress and in the Texas State Legislature, the Republican candidates hold the lead. Forty-six percent of likely voters said they would choose the Republican candidate for Congress compared to 35 percent who said they would choose the Democrat. For the Texas State Legislature, 38 percent said they would choose the Republican compared to 31 percent choosing the Democrat.

The transportation ballot initiative, which, if passed, will spend $1.4 billion from the state’s Rainy Day Fund to pay for transportation infrastructure projects, is supported by an overwhelming 74 percent of likely voters.

"Davis is running slightly ahead of other Democrats on the ballot and over-performs compared to Democrats from recent statewide races," says University of Texas Professor Daron Shaw (Texas Lyceum Class of 2003) who conducted this year’s Lyceum Poll along with Lyceum Poll Research Director, Joshua Blank. “But the number of candidates who have made up this kind of deficit in the last month, in a state where party ID favors the other side so consistently, is close to zero.”

Governor Perry approval/opinions on his indictment

Texas Governor Rick Perry’s positive approval rating (57 percent among registered voters) basically remains unchanged from this time last year. However, Texans are unsure about the Governor’s innocence after an independent prosecutor hired by the Travis County District Attorney’s Office indicted him for allegedly abusing his power by threatening to veto funding for the Public Integrity Unit unless the head of that office, District Attorney Rosemary Lehmberg, resigned after her arrest for a DUI. For those Texans who had heard something about the indictment, 43 percent said it is “too soon to tell” whether or not Perry was innocent or guilty, while 28 percent believe the Governor is innocent, and 22 percent believe he is guilty. It is interesting to note that an overwhelming 72 percent believe the charges against the Governor are mostly political, whereas only 28 percent see them as legitimate criminal charges.

Similar to previous Lyceum polls, Texans remain positive about the state’s economy compared to the nation’s. When asked whether Texas’ economy is better off, worse or about the same as the rest of the country, 61 percent of those polled expressed the opinion that Texas’ economy is better off.

President Obama’s job approval among adult Texans is almost evenly split, with 48 percent approving and 50 percent registering disapproval (among registered voters 44 percent approve, 53 percent disapprove). Not surprising, Republicans continue to rank President Obama’s performance as poor (89 percent), while Democrats give him a good rating at 83 percent.
University of Texas Professor Daron Shaw (Texas Lyceum Class of 2003) conducted the poll of 1,000 Texas adults, which has a margin of error of +/- 3.1 percentage points. Dr. Shaw and his assistant, University of Texas PhD candidate Joshua Blank, used the latest in polling techniques, contacting respondents both by landline as well as cell phones with the use of English and Spanish language instrumentation.

Texas Lyceum President Roberta Schwartz comments, “In the eighth year of our Annual Texas Lyceum Independent Poll, it’s always exciting and thought-provoking to take the pulse of Texans on key issues and candidates shaping our Lone Star State – 2014’s results are very interesting!”

Thinking ahead to the November 2014 general election...

(For Q9 through Q11 respondents were asked the question as written below. Those unwilling to express an opinion, were provided with the follow-up: “If you had to make a choice, who would you choose?” The results presented below combine those initially expressing an opinion with those prompted after initially being unsure. Likely voters were determined with a regression model that relied on turnout intention, interest, race/ethnicity, and partisan strength to predict turnout.)
